

The Arts Council and Dublin City University invite applications from mid-career and established writers for Writer in Residence for the calendar year 2025.

The Arts Council Writer in Residence programme was established to provide a stimulating environment for the writer, and afford a degree of financial support to concentrate on their own practice. Additionally, the residency brings energy and dynamism to the university, and allows students and faculty to engage with a practicing writer for a concentrated period.

1.1 About the residency

The Writer in Residence will be engaged for the calendar year 2025 and will be situated in the School of English in Dublin City University, with the opportunity to engage with the wider campus.

The residency will be divided into two parts:

1. From January to June 2025 the Writer in Residence will be supported to engage with students and staff. This programme of engagement will be designed by the resident writer, in consultation with the faculty of the university, and could include focused teaching, workshops, mentoring, public events or other activities which bring new energy to the creative writing programme. Contact time with staff and students during this time will be capped at 4 hours per week, and the writer will not be expected to deliver core curriculum.
2. From July onwards, the writer will be supported to concentrate on his or her own practice.

The fee to the Writer in Residence is €30,000, with the Arts Council contributing €20,000 and the university €10,000. Dublin City University will provide the Writer in Residence with a dedicated space, where they can conduct their own creative practice, within the university. Dublin City University will also support the residency administratively.

The entire fee will be paid to the writer directly by the Arts Council. It will be paid in two instalments, with a final report by the writer at the conclusion of the residency.

1.2 Arts Council – DCU Writer in Residence

The Writer in Residence will be hosted by the School of English and will be welcomed as a valued and integral member of our small, collegial and dynamic School. He/she will have the ability to offer writing workshops, tutorial sessions, masterclasses, talks, and other kinds of events, to students and staff of DCU, as an additional and complementary part of the university's Creative Writing offering. This may include working, from time to time, with students at undergraduate, Master's, and PhD level, as well as members of staff who could benefit from the Writer in Residence's expertise.
